- No one is talking about the locust plagues
- All of this is setting the stage for Agenda 21.

Each day we learn more about this virus, its alleged lethality as well as the hysteria it brings. Whether life was normal before the virus is debatable, and whether it will be once we're done dealing with it is why we have to persevere today. Governments around the world are beginning to synchronize their responses to the virus in a lockstep-style formation, but as this takes place, American's are gradually learning who has funded such a complex plan.

The rest of the nation, and eventually the rest of the world, is beginning to wake up to the deeds of Bill Gates. For almost two weeks now, his social media handles have been flooded with calls for his arrest because of his perceived hidden actions. With this expose taking place, almost simultaneously, funding from the World Health Organization is frozen in their deliberate attempt to censor critical information.

There is no easy way to say this, but regardless of who the culprit may be, a reckoning is being summoned. Not only do people want life back before the surveillance, but they also thirst for justice and answers to such a heinous act. The only problem is in this Hegelian dialectic, the very same people who caused the problem are being called upon to provide a solution. The most obvious answer usually isn't the right one, but as time goes, I suppose we'll all see.
